

Action taken report by Internal Quality Assurance Cell 2020-21

The input on our curriculum was collected using diverse methods, such as student surveys, employer surveys, alumni surveys, faculty surveys, and discussions during IQAC sessions. The main points of feedback were as follows:

- Interdisciplinary Approach: Many students appreciated interdisciplinary courses but suggested a need for more seamless integration and practical application of concepts.
- Industry Interface: Some students sought greater opportunities for industry interactions, internships, and exposure to real-world challenges.

1. Action Taken:

- Industry Collaborations: Partnerships with industry leaders have been established to facilitate guest lectures, workshops, and internship opportunities for students.
- Student-Centric Learning: A student-centred approach has been adopted, where feedback mechanisms have been strengthened, and student representatives are actively involved in curriculum design and review processes.

2. Conclusion:

In conclusion, the IQAC at Adamas University recognizes the necessity of an adaptable curriculum that anticipates the evolving needs of our students and the professional landscape. The feedback we've received has been pivotal in guiding our initiatives to enhance the educational journey for our students.

Through these efforts, we are confident that our curriculum has been enhanced to better equip our students with the skills, knowledge, and practical experiences essential for successful careers. Our goal is to cultivate an environment where learning extends beyond traditional boundaries, fostering students who are flexible, inventive, and socially conscious professionals.

Looking ahead, we are committed to continually refining our curriculum. Regular assessments, feedback mechanisms, and collaborations with industry partners will be essential in ensuring that our educational offerings remain at the forefront of excellence.

The IQAC at Adamas University appreciates the collaboration and support of all stakeholders as we work together towards educational advancement and excellence.
